

Calgary woman charged with making false allegations against ex-boyfriend

Thursday, September 01, 2011 4:09 PM

22-year-old Jessica Rogers is charged with more than a dozen counts of making false allegations and fabricating evidence.

Photo Credit: Global News, Calgary Canada

CALGARY – A woman who told authorities he ex-boyfriend was harassing her has been charged with more than a dozen counts of making false allegations and fabricating evidence.

Fire crews were called to 22-year-old Jessica Lynne Rogers home on Saturday, July 13th. Rogers, who lives with her mother, smelled smoke coming from the garage.

At the time she told Global News she suspected the blaze was linked to a past abusive relationship she had been involved in.

Between Tuesday, April 5 and Thursday, August 25 its alleged Rogers filed multiple reports with CPS claiming her ex-boyfriend was harassing, threatening and stalking her.

The Domestic Conflict Unit has now determined these allegations are not true.

On Wednesday, police arrested Rogers and charged her with six counts of providing a false statement, six counts of filing a false report, three counts of fabricating evidence and one count of obstruction of justice.

Arson detectives continue to investigate the fire at Rogers home. No charges have been laid in connection to that case.